Cape Party deputy leader Adrian Kay, called on the ANC to declare its stance on the status of the Springbok emblem. In a statement released to the Press, Kay attacked the ANC for "Using the Springbok as a political rugby ball" to threaten minorities in the country.

"The ANC is determined to extinguish every vestige of non-black civilization in South Africa and the springbok is merely the latest target"

Kay called on minorities in the Cape to unite to stop the tide of Africanization in the Cape. "As witnessed in Delft, native Kapenaars come a distant second to blacks. Its virtually Apartheid...people need to go to Symphony Road (Delft) to see the crime that is being perpetrated against our people"

The Cape Party is contesting the 2009 Elections running on a ticket that promises to make the Western cape Independent from South Africa.
